Overview

Established in May 2010, the George Washington University School of Nursing (SON) develops nursing leaders who are actively engaged in health promotion, patient advocacy, and health care innovation. By providing students with a high level of nursing expertise and professional leadership skills, graduates of GW’s SON are prepared to take personal responsibility for improving the health care system and patient care in this country.

GW School of Nursing has emerged at precisely the right time and in the right place. As a young school, we are unbound by tradition. We are a school on the move. And we need your help.

Join the School of Nursing in Making History

Nursing is at an exciting yet critical intersection. Changes across America are bringing demand for nurses who deliver the highest levels of clinical care, who take an active role in redefining health care, and who serve on the front lines in shifting patient care from treatment to prevention. Meeting our goals will vastly increase our capacity for good and amplify our voice at this crucial time in U.S. health care. Your gift will have an immediate impact on nursing and, through the years, on hundreds of thousands of patients. We invite you to join us on this ambitious journey.
